INTRODUCTION

IN presenting this, our 33rd Descriptive Catalog of Carnations (alphabetically arranged) to the public, at reduced prices, we beg to thank our numerous friends and customers for their support, and we trust that, by strict attention to business, to merit a continuance of their favors. We have made a special study of tree or perpetual flowering Carnations for the past 39 years, the qualities of which are too well known to require comment.

All Novelties are grown three seasons before cataloging or offering for sale, and can be seen growing or flowering.

All plants are grown in the open ground, thus rendering them more hardy for transplanting than from under glass frames. Our stock of Carnations is the largest in Australasia, and all plants are healthy and free from disease. Only strong plants sent out. Government Certificate, showing plants free from disease. Plants available at all seasons of the year.

Visitors are always welcome to our Nursery, which is easily accessible and conveniently situated at Boundary Road, Burwood (near High Street). Take Burwood tram from Prince's Bridge, Melbourne, to terminous. Our Nursery is 25 minutes walk due south towards Oakleigh, or take the train to Ashburton, which is 20 minutes from our Nursery. Also take the train to HOLMESGLEN (Glen Waverly line); and our Nursery, which is on top of the hill, overlooks the station, which is a half-mile due north along Boundary Road.

Visitors are cordially invited to inspect our stock of Carnations, which is the largest in the Commonwealth. There is always something interesting for the lovers of these flowers, as our Carnations are blooming all the year.

Our Nursery is ten acres in extent.

TO THE TRADE.—We are the largest growers of Carnations throughout Australasia; therefore we can supply your requirements. Special quotations on application for quantities.

Our stock comprises some 200,000 plants, in 600 odd varieties.

AWARDS.

Our Carnations have gained during the past 39 years the following Awards:—Over 1,100 First Prizes, 72 Certificates. 30 Gold Medals, 26 Silver Medals, and numerous trophies, including the Capt. and Minnie Lynch Trophy (valued at 20 guineas) ten times in succession for cut flowers. Also all the principal prizes competed for during 1930.

It has been our privilege in the past to number among our many and widespread customers most of the leading growers in the Commonwealth, and we find no reason for modesty that would preclude us from announcing that the select clientele we enjoy is due to one indisputable fact—we grow only the best in Carnations—and the service we give is such as ourselves desire when purchasing.

Realising the difficulty confronting the inexperienced when faced with the task of making a satisfactory selection from a host of varieties with which he is unacquainted, we take pleasure in presenting this Price List showing the varieties we strongly recommend, thus affording the would-be purchaser an opportunity of selecting with confidence from what might be termed the aristocrats of the Carnation world.

During the past season we received numerous testimonials as to the quality of our plants and the way in which they reached their destination, but space will not permit us to print.

CULTIVATION OF PERPETUAL FLOWERING CARNATIONS.

Our readers will readily recognise the impossibility of giving directions which apply generally over a whole continent, or which will meet alike the needs of the Carnation enthusiast of the average flower lover. This we have not attempted, but have simply given a few hints based on the methods successfully followed by us during the past 40 years, leaving our readers to make such modifications as differences in soil and climatic and circumstances may render necessary.

SOIL.—It is hard to say what is the ideal soil for Carnations, since there are few soils in which, given proper preparation of the soil and reasonable attention, they will not give satisfaction. A light or sandy soil will be much improved by the addition of heavy loam, well-decayed cow manure, or vegetable matter; while to a soil which is heavy or sticky, should be added sand, decayed stable manure or vegetable matter, and lime.

POSITION.—Carnations will never succeed if planted under trees or shrubs, and, if possible, a position surrounded by walls or hedges should be avoided. An open position is best, and if the beds can be raised, say, six inches above their surroundings, so much the better. The ground should be trenched or dug deeply, being careful not to bring the subsoil to the surface; and, if not naturally well drained, underground drains may be necessary.

MANURE.—Carnations cannot bear strong, rank manures. A bed which has been well manured for a previous crop, or bed of rich new soil, will suit them splendidly without any addition of manure. Failing these, old, well-decayed manure, leaf-mold, etc., should be well mixed with the soil to a depth of about eighteen inches if the position is to be a permanent one. Where the beds are made up afresh each year, and old plants replaced by young ones, cultivation to a good spade's depth seems to be quite sufficient in most soils.

Lime is very beneficial, but as it is not advisable to apply manure and lime at the same time, the latter may be given in the form of surface dressings some time after planting, especially during the winter.

Where Carnations are planted among other plants in the garden, the above directions may be followed so far as they apply; and overcrowding by other plants must be by all means avoided.

PLANTING.—If possible, have the beds or positions among the other plants in your garden ready as early as possible so that they will have time to settle down before planting. Carnations may be planted at any time of the year, but we strongly advise planting early—say from March to June, for spring and summer flowering to get good results. For autumn and winter flowering plant from August to November. Have the rows two feet apart and the plants twelve to eighteen inches apart in rows. Choose a cool day if possible. Plant firmly, never putting the plants lower than the base of the first pair of leaves or no deeper than they have been growing in the Nursery. When planting, it is advisable before taking the wrapping from the plants to give the roots a light watering and again after planting to give a good watering, after which, overhead sprinkling once or twice a day until they have picked up. Should rain follow immediately after planting, Carnations pick up and go ahead in no time. Shading with leafy tree branches for a few days is to be recommended for hot weather planting.

Most perpetuals will throw up flower shoots as soon as growth commences; all such flower shoots should be cut or pinched back or they will exhaust the plant before it has a thorough root hold. When they have grown into nice sized bushes showing plenty of vigorous growth, they will then be capable of sending up strong flower shoots, each shoot will produce a number of buds, and in most cases the side buds should be nipped off in the early stages, leaving only the centre or crown bud, which will develop into a much larger and finer flower when treated in this manner. Varieties which have very full flowers and short calyx should not be disbudded for ordinary purposes, the crown or centre bud only should be nipped off.

CULTIVATION.—Hoe up the weeds as soon as they appear, and keep the surface well stirred, though not deeply, for the roots will be very near the surface, and must on no account be disturbed. Watch for rust and spot, and remove and burn all infected leaves. During the wet season dust the plants at least once a fortnight with lime, early in the morning before a fine day being the best time.

As soon as the flower stems are long enough they should be tied up to stakes. Anything that will make a fairly neat stake will do. Most Carnations, in the spring, produce too many flower stems, and too many buds on the stems are also sometimes produced. It is perhaps unwise to lay down any definite rule for rectifying this. So much depends upon the purpose for which the flowers are grown. An exhibitor will cut back all but a few of the strongest stems, and reserve only the central bud on each. When thus heavily thinned, it will often be necessary to place a rubber band on the buds as soon as they are large enough, to prevent bursting. For garden decoration and cut flowers less drastic methods are allowable. But in any case, it is well to impose some check on most of the perpetuals during (or before) the spring flowering season, especially to those very free-flowering varieties, which are liable to bloom to exhaustion at that season if unchecked. And we certainly would advise the removal of all but the terminal bud on each stem; or, if this is objected to, only those springing from the lower part of the stem should be retained in addition to the terminal bud. All blooms intended for exhibition should be shaded as they begin to open. Our method is to make a stand by nailing a piece of deal six inches square on top of a stake, and cut a slit in the board to receive the flower stem. Push the stake in just deep enough, so that the bud comes just above the board and stands upright in the centre. Then cover with four or five inch flower pot. Where thrip abounds it is necessary to cover the buds at an early stage, and seal up the hole with plaster of Paris.

If liquid manure is necessary, use soot, blood, or cow manure, or a mixture of all. Never use any of them strong. Liquid made from cow manure should be like weak tea, and from blood like wine. Sulphate of ammonia at the rate of a teaspoonful to two gallons of water, giving a quart to each plant, is also used by some growers, but the use of artificial fertilisers should be adopted only after careful experiment. Never apply liquid manure except when the plants are in full growth, and when the soil is moist. If possible, put a good coating of decayed stable manure between the rows before the hot weather sets in.

After the spring-flowering cut back all old flower stems on the "perpetuals." Then, if early autumn blooms are required, keep the growth moving by occasional waterings when required. Spring-planted "perpetuals," however, or plants not permitted to flower in spring, will produce the best autumn blooms.

We strongly recommend planting some perpetuals each spring, for autumn and winter flowering, especially where from any cause such as thrip, it is difficult to get good blooms in spring. Cut back all flower shoots up to about the end of December, or till plants are fairly strong. The latter is very necessary whenever planting is done, for the plants must not be allowed to flower when very small.

PROPAGATION.—Most successful growers replace their old plants fairly frequently, in some cases annually, with young plants raised from cuttings or layers. From April onward is the best time for striking cuttings. Select from healthy plants shoots about three inches long. Pull (not cut) them off, and trim off the lower leaves.

Any good garden soil well worked up with a quantity of sharp sand in a well sheltered position of the garden will be found ideal for striking cuttings. Make your beds firm before planting, and plant your cuttings one inch deep, leaving enough space between each, in order to press the soil firmly around each one.

LAYERING.—Start directly the spring flowering is over. Select strong, healthy shoots, and strip off the lower leaves. Then, beginning underneath at a joint about four inches from the end, cut the shoot half-way through with a slanting upward cut. Peg down the part nearest the plant into fine soil, and raise the other part upright. Pack fine soil round and keep moist till rooted.

DISEASE OF CARNATIONS.—Rust first appears as a round swelling on the leaves, which afterwards bursts and lets loose a brown powder, the spores of the fungus. The only effective remedy is to cut off and burn all infected leaves before the swelling bursts.

Spot generally appears in the Winter as a round purple spot on the leaves. Plants surrounded by walls and hedges are specially liable to it. Picking off and burning the infected leaves and regular dustings of lime are the best remedies.

TO OBTAIN BLOOMS IN WINTER.—Plant during the Spring months a judicious selection of the freer flowering perpetual varieties. They will grow quickly at this time of the year, and throw up the flower stems which, however, must be pinched off about the second pair of leaves from the base. Do not let them commence to flower till about April. They will then flower all through the Winter. Many of the varieties, particularly the American type, produce much better flowers during the late Autumn and Winter than in the Spring and Summer months.

AMERICAN CARNATIONS.

AMERICAN AND AUSTRALIAN RAISED DECORATIVE PERPETUALS.

(Including Many of Our Own Raising).

First coming into prominence in America (hence the name) these Carnations have attained a world-wide popularity. They differ from the Show Perpetuals in having more or less serrated petals, and while the range of color in this class is smaller they have in abundance those self-color flowers, especially the pink self, which is not over plentiful among smooth edge Perpetuals. This year we offer some new colors not known in this class before, including many importations from England, America and different States of the Commonwealth. We can strongly recommend these and the older varieties for their long stiff stems, free-flowering habit and sweet perfume, which makes them invaluable for the garden and table decoration, especially in Autumn and Winter.

All varieties marked (D) after their name in this Catalog are of the above type.

AUSTRALIAN RAISED SMOOTH-EDGED OR SHOW CARNATIONS.

All of the varieties marked (S) after their name in this list are of free-flowering habit, and whose flowers are smooth-edged. This Smooth-edged or Show Perpetuals, the name given to those which are class has undoubtedly established itself as the Australian Carnation, being improved continually by the addition of many new varieties and possessing as it does much of the beautiful form of the English Spring Bloomer, with the free-flowering qualities of the Perpetual. The list is being improved continually by the addition of many new varieties, the discarding of those which have passed their time of usefulness.

All Plants Guaranteed True to Name.

Can you think of a present that costs so little and receives so much appreciation. Distinctive charm and beauty of thought accompany a gift of Carnations; they are an uncommon gift of friendliness. Why not remember someone with Carnations today? We can send your flower message anywhere.

NOVELTIES FOR 1931.

The following Novelties for 1931, which were raised by us, have proved to be all good perpetuals and have been tested for three seasons, and we can recommend them as some of the finest varieties that are in cultivation. A unique and delightful shade of mauve, similar in color to a deep tone of Cattleya Orchid. The blooms are of the finest show type, and are large with large shell-like petals. Handsome, bold, and of good form, the flowers are developed on good stems, with good growth of plant and perpetual. A superb show variety 2/6

Having in addition the robust free flowering habit of growth and strong flower stem, this variety will be good for either show or garden decoration. The color is very pleasing, being a white ground heavily marked and edged bright scarlet, and is quite distinct. A great improvement in all ways to the well-known variety "Glendale" 2/6
- ROSETTA (S)—A pure self, in a new and pleasing shade of color, which is bright rose. This variety will be valuable to the show bench as there are very few smooth-edged varieties of this color. - *POULTER'S SURPRISE (D)—The most wonderful Carnation we have sent out for some time for its free flowering ability. This Carnation we claim to be the best all-round variety for cut flowers that has been produced, and we predict it will be grown by every florist throughout Australia when it is known. Many of the leading florists whom we supply with cut flowers agree that there is no other Carnation to equal this variety for its color and form and stem on made-up floral work. We raised such varieties as "Salamander," "Florrie," "Jacko," "Sallie Poulter" and many others whom the florists now grow as standard varieties, so we can justly claim all we say about this variety. The growth is of the very best, being healthy and strong growing. The stems are a feature, which are extra stiff and straight, and are long at all times. For table decoration this variety leads them all for its stem. The calyx is long and firm, of the non-bursting type. The blooms are of medium size and can be grown to good exhibition size. The petals are cup-shaped and form an attractive bloom. The color, which is most pleasing, is between flesh pink and salmon pink, midway between "Florrie" and "Salamander." "Poulter's Surprise" will be a true friend to the cut flower grower and a money maker. Truly a wonderful Carnation. We are growing 10,000 plants of "Poulter's Surprise" for cut flowers £1 per dozen plants; 2/- each
- *RAINBOW (S)—A most beautiful show Carnation of wonderful coloring, which is rich lemon yellow at base of petals very thickly pencilled with very fine linings and overlaid with cerise pink; a combination of color that will attract attention always. There is no other Carnation of the same coloring as yet on the market. The plants are of exceptional strong growth, with large and good blooms of excellent show form, with good calyx 2/6
- WILBRINK (S)—Another sport of that brilliant Carnation "Florence Stuart." Color: White ground edged and heavily pencilled a dull shade of maroon or wine color with a beautiful sheen through the petals. Quite distinct, identical with "Florence Stuart" in other respects 2/-

- APSLEY—One of the most popular of the very free flowering Carnations is "Denet." "Apsley" is a sport from that variety, having the same large blooms, and free flowering habit, but a much deeper and decidedly more pleasing color—deep rose pink in centre, edges of petals lighter 1/6
- ARMADALE—Color: White ground, evenly pencilled and marked crimson; large blooms on long stems; free flowering; strong grower; good for any purpose. We can recommend this variety 1/-

In other respects similar to "Marden" 1/-

VARIATIONS OF COLOR.

The colors of all flowers vary in some districts at different times of the year. In warm climates they grow much lighter in color than in the cooler districts. Blooms that are covered are also different from those uncovered. The colors of the Carnations described in this Catalog are from blooms taken growing under ordinary garden conditions at Burwood.

We wish to warn intending patrons of plants to beware of low-priced offers of bargains, as in some cases these prove to be dear at any price.

The best is always the CHEAPEST, and in comparing prices it would be wise to compare the quality of the plants offered.

The plants sent out from our Nursery are well-grown, healthy and true to name, and worth the price charged for them.

We have no agents or travellers.
